Summary of the Discussion

The following items were mentioned on 07/21/2005 at 2
p.m.:

1 - Articles 6 and 19(2) PCT:

1.1 - The changes in claim 1 filed with letter of 10/12/04 introduce matters which, in contradiction to Article 19(2) PCT, exceed the disclosure of the application at the time of filing. Claim 1 does not have the characteristic "cutting cylinder (127)", so that the subject of the claim is extended. A permissible version, to which the representative agrees, would be the following:

"A web-fed rotary printing press with a least one printing
unit ... sectional lengths of the product...and works together with a cutting cylinder (127') having four cutters which are arranged one behind the other, viewed in the circumferential direction of the transport cylinder".

1.2 - Claim 2 has two embodiments (a transport cylinder either with a cutting cylinder having 4 cutters on its circumference or having cutting cylinders each with 2 cutters on their circumferences). Such wording is unclear and the representative should decide which embodiment is to be claimed in claim 2. The examiner agreed to the representative filing a new claim with the following wording:

"A web-fed rotary printing press with a least one printing unit ...) sectional lengths of the product... which works together with two cutting cylinders (127), which are arranged one behind the other on the circumference of the transport cylinder and each of which supports two cutters."

2. Article 33(1), 33(2), 33(3) PCT

2.1 In judging the requirements of PCT regarding novelty or inventive activities, the examiner has considered claims 1 and 2 with the following wording in order to overcome the objections of the previous paragraph:

"A web-fed rotary printing press with a least one printing unit ... sectional lengths of the product...and works together with a cutting cylinder (127') having four cutters which are arranged one behind the other, viewed in the circumferential direction of the transport cylinder".

"A web-fed rotary printing press with a least one printing unit ...) sectional lengths of the product... which works together with two cutting cylinders (127), which are arranged one behind the other on the circumference of the transport cylinder and each of which supports two cutters."

2.2 The examiner agrees that the subject of independent claims 1, 2 is novel.

2.3 The examiner had doubts regarding inventive activities in connection with claim 1 and expressed his opinion to the representative.

The representative explained his arguments as to why he believes claim 1 to be inventive.

3. - Miscellaneous

- As discussed, the representative will file new claims 1 and 2 per fax in order to meet the requirements of PCT in respect to Article 6 and 19(2).

- After thorough reflection, the examiner now considers the subject of claim 1 to be inventive.
